Sizzling Canadian-Made Swimwear

Confession: Despite leaving our travel destinations with plenty of memories and a jam-packed digital camera, we often fall prey to the temptation of the knick knack.

Rather than waste our last foreign currency on another "sandglobe" (yes, really), we're saving our pesos for a memento worth investing in: a Destineau swimsuit ($220 for a two-piece, $240 for a one-piece). With seven adorable styles to choose from, remembering a destination has never looked cuter (even if we haven't been there...yet).

Dreamed up by swimsuit lover Cristin Lazier, each piece features a gorgeous fabric print from designer Courtney Wotherspoon and a cut to match. The result? Showstopping, made in Canada swimwear inspired by classic tropical destinations.

We were immediately smitten with the nautical Capri maillot (that recalls all the glamour of Jackie O's favourite Italian destination), while the bright colours and jewel print of the Miami bikini is guaranteed to make a splash at any beach. And we adored the preppy-chic print of the Hamptons bikini, and loved it even more when we saw the matching baby suit (from $35) (perfect for all the Sweetmamas out there).

Best of all, because Destineau understands women's sizing, we can custom order our tops and bottoms in split sizes to ensure our new suit fits perfectly.

Which is more than we can say for that "Irie, Mon" T-shirt.
